Medium: Oil on canvas

Description: "Clancy Made her Way South across Washington Square" is part of a saga of romance and murder centered around the young ingénue Clancy in New York City. Cornwell provided a total of thirty-two illustrations for this series. In this painting Cornwell created a dynamic atmosphere by leading the viewer's eye from the protagonist, Clancy, towards the Washington Square Arch via a curved road. When looking at this winter cityscape one can imagine the windy conditions and empathizes with the pedestrians that are walking against the chilled gusts with their opened umbrellas.
