Description: In "Undergrowth", Duennebier employs harsh shadows and deep, rich colors reminiscent of Caravaggio's tenebrous paintings of the 16th century. The fungus-like growth blooms forth from the darkness. The rich oranges, yellows, and whites illuminate the murky blue-black water in the background, as if a light is being shone through it. Duennebeier's brushstrokes emphasize both the water's weightlessness and the solidity of the growth deep beneath the waves.
